This report looks back and celebrates the first year of AWID’s new strategic plan as we took our first steps towards our desired outcomes of supporting feminist movements to thrive, challenging anti-rights agendas and co-creating feminist realities.

We worked with feminists to disrupt anti-rights agendas, achieving important victories fought and won within the United Nations system when ground-breaking language on structural discrimination, sexual rights, and states’ obligations were included in a number of resolutions. Yes, the multilateral system is in crisis and in need of serious strengthening but these victories are important as they contribute to the legitimacy of feminist demands, providing feminist movements with more pressure points and momentum to advance our agendas.

We tried and tested different ways to build knowledge with feminist movements through webinars, podcasts and ‘live’ conversations. We developed facilitation guides with popular educators to reclaim knowledge in the interest of social and gender justice, even about a topic as seemingly opaque as illicit funding flows. We commissioned blogs and opinions about how feminist groups fund and resource themselves and threw light on the threats facing our human rights systems.

Within AWID, we practiced and learned from our shared leadership approach, and told the story of the trials and tribulations of co-leading a global, virtual organization. We don’t have a definitive answer to what feminist leadership looks like, but we know, a year on, that a continued commitment to collective experimentation and learning has enabled us to keep building an organization that we are all excited to contribute to.

As we look back on this year, we want to thank all our friends and supporters, colleagues and companions, who have given their time and shared their wealth of knowledge and wisdom with us.

We want to thank our members who helped frame our strategic plan and joined us to make feminist demands. We could not do this work without you.
Introducing our new Strategic Plan
Introducing our new Strategic Plan

AWID’s 2018 - 2022 Strategic Plan was the result of a year long participatory process with partners, members and feminist movements.

We are a global, feminist, movement-support and membership organization. We work at the sites of change to resist the intersections of patriarchy with corporate power, fundamentalisms, and fascisms. We recognise that our impact is greater when we are able to deepen and leverage our collective work.

We work towards our organization outcomes through four initiatives.

Read more: Get to know AWID’s plan to Co-Create Feminist Realities >
Outcomes:

1. Feminist, women’s rights and gender justice movements are thriving, with stronger collective power to challenge patriarchy and advance feminist agendas.

2. Feminist and gender justice movements are better able to challenge, disrupt and delegitimize the consensus of actors promoting patriarchy within international spaces.

3. Feminist realities, proposals and narratives flourish, are amplified and become increasingly influential.

4. AWID is a thriving learning organization with an enabling work environment grounded in intersectional feminist principles.

Mission:

We support feminist, women’s rights and gender justice movements to thrive, to be a driving force in challenging systems of oppression, and to co-create feminist realities.

Vision:

We envision a world where feminist realities flourish, where resources and power are shared in ways that enable everyone, and future generations, to thrive and realize their full potential with dignity, love and respect, and where Earth nurtures life in all its diversity.
Advancing Universal Rights and Justice: Uprooting fascisms and fundamentalisms

AWID promotes the universality and indivisibility of rights, advances women’s rights and feminist agendas in the international human rights system and challenges fundamentalist and fascist influence and actors.

Building knowledge on anti-rights actors

In collaboration with partners in The Observatory of the Universality of Rights (OURs), we monitored, shared knowledge and unpacked the strategies and influence of anti-rights actors. We strengthened connections and do work together that supports movement building and cross-movement campaigns.

Building on the successful publication and dissemination of the Rights at Risk Trends report in 2017, we worked with feminists to build knowledge around the research. This included developing workshop facilitation guides, supporting activists to use it in their community work and getting messages into the media.

Two examples of knowledge building (among other things!)

Akahata, an OURs working group member based in Buenos Aires, led a second print run of the Spanish-language version of the report. This meant the analysis reached a wider audience.

AWID presented the Trends report and co-hosted a webinar on challenging religious fundamentalisms to audiences in the East European and Central Asia region where there are worrying signs of growing fascisms and fundamentalisms.

After the webinar - The #RightsatRisk webinar was seen as "useful" or "very useful" by 100% of the participants.

After the presentation - The participants created a listserv, enriching a new regional network to combat gender-based violence related to religious fundamentalisms.
Joint advocacy in multilateral spaces

AWID and our partners collaborated to secure major gains at the Human Rights Council (HRC).

Against the backdrop of a global backlash against sexual and reproductive health rights (SRHR), AWID and our partners worked to ensure that feminist agendas were advanced in the international human rights system. In June, the HRC passed the Resolution on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women and Girls that explicitly recognizes SRHR, a first for a politically-negotiated document.

The Resolution on Maternal Mortality in September reiterates SRHR as integral to the right to health in humanitarian settings and makes explicit references to host countries’ obligation to protect SRHR in the case of women and girl refugees, including the need to ensure access to comprehensive sexuality education in humanitarian settings.

Building Feminist Economies: Challenging corporate power

AWID challenges corporate power and the dominant economic system. We open up space to imagine and articulate feminist economies.

Joint advocacy to counter corporate power

Corporate power is deepening inequalities and undermining democracy, while corporate human rights abuse is deeply gendered.

That is why we worked with partners to push for an international legally-binding instrument on “transnational corporations and other business enterprises with respect to human rights”, known as the Binding Treaty) at the Human Rights Council.

We see the binding treaty process not only as an advocacy opportunity but also as a movement-building process in which feminist and allied movements can articulate propositional demands in solidarity with one another.

Movement building towards a Binding Treaty

AWID co-leads the Feminists for a Binding Treaty (F4BT), an informal group of feminists from multiple geographies, regions, and identities that come together to develop joint demands and strategies for a feminist binding treaty.

The F4BT group continues to welcome new members.

We built alliances and solidarity as co-leaders of F4BT, and as a member of the civil-society coalition: Treaty Alliance.

We support the development of the feminist statement, for an end to corporate abuse of women’s rights (signed so far by 376 organizations).

We created knowledge products that support feminist movements.
Training toolkits

Feminist popular educators from El Salvador, Russia, Uganda, Spain, Philippines, and Argentina co-created tools that connect Illicit Financial Flows to gender justice and the everyday lives of women, girls, trans, intersex and gender non conforming people.

Piloted in three contexts

→ El Salvador: 35 participants from social movements including sex workers, land workers, and informal workers.
→ Argentina: 100 feminist activists from unions, students, LGBTQI, indigenous, and other social movements from Latin America.
→ Russia: 15 participants, including academics, feminists, informal workers, NGOs working on election monitoring, and trade union representatives.

Building knowledge

Building on our Illicit Financial Flows primer, we worked with popular educators to co-create a facilitation guide for feminist and social justice activists to build knowledge within their communities and movements on why illicit financial flows affect us all and why challenging them is a feminist issue.

Calling out the myths of the economic system, AWID supported the campaigns of The Feminist Forum Against the G20 (November), a coalition composed of Latin American feminist, working-class, migrant, indigenous, peasant, afro-descendant, lesbian, trans and queer movements and communities.

The Feminist Forum is leading a vibrant resistance to the G20’s neoliberal agenda.

5 Myths around G20

MYTH #1
The G20 represents the whole world.

MYTH #2
Gender has increasingly become a concern on the G20 agenda.

MYTH #3
Corporate engagement is always good news for development.

MYTH #4
The G20 can help “develop” Africa.

MYTH #5
G20 critics’ demands are scattered and disorganized.

Resourcing Women’s Rights: Shining light on the current funding ecosystem

AWID supports movements’ power to be resourced on their own terms.

Money and movements

Through the Count Me In! (CMI!) Consortium, we brought activists and funders together to share ideas and practice on how to better resource feminist movements.

The convening was held in April 2018, in Naivasha, Kenya.

It was attended by:
- 51 activists
- 37 funders
- 25 CMI! members

Money & Movements by the Count Me In! Consortium >

Getting feminist movements into the Spotlight

AWID and our CMI! partners showed there is strength in collective advocacy when we reached out and engaged constituency-led movements to engage with the UN-EU Spotlight Initiative and tell them how € 500 million can best serve women and girls.

CMI!
Count Me In!

This is a special joint initiative led by Mama Cash, including the sex worker-led Red Umbrella Fund (RUF), together with AWID, CREA, Just Associates (JASS) and Urgent Action Fund – Africa (representing its sister funds in the US and Latin America). The Dutch gender platform WO=MEN is a strategic partner for lobbying and advocacy. The Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs selected Count Me In! as a strategic partner within its Dialogue and Dissent policy framework.

Feminist recommendations to the Spotlight Initiative

What we did

• Brought together feminists online and offline to produce strong recommendations calling for feminist movements to have an explicit leadership role in every level of Spotlight

• Mobilized our members and other feminists to have their say on what they expect from Spotlight. Nearly 600 from over 100 countries took part

• Engaged and influenced key decision-makers around feminist recommendations

• Tracked developments to monitor changes

What it led to

It is a direct result of joint advocacy and mobilization that Spotlight created "Pillar 6", funding dedicated to women’s rights organizations.

There is also Spotlight-wide commitment to funding civil society.

Out of the 18 recommendations put forward:

• 2 recommendations fully accepted
  • Spotlight should encourage other donors to directly fund feminist groups
  • Coordination between civil society reference groups and decision making/governance bodies

• 8 recommendations partially implemented

• 7 not (yet) implemented

• 1 rejected

Our advocacy continues!

Co-Creating Feminist Realities:
Inspiring and strengthening our power in action

This initiative seeks to unearth, amplify and co-create feminist realities, which are lived experiences and hopeful experiments grounded in feminist and social justice values.

2016 (Brazil)

At the 13th AWID Forum, we felt and saw that feminist realities are not only possible but they exist now.

That idea took hold, captured our imagination and we set about exploring the idea and laying out an approach for it.

2018 (Sri Lanka)

We organized a small meeting to deepen and expand our initial framework on feminist realities and to develop methodologies to shape a toolkit for unearthing and amplifying feminist realities.

We convened and attended workshops and meetings to gain a deeper understanding of and to locate feminist realities. Feminists from a range of movements and regions came together to share what feminist realities look like to them.

- Lebanon, at the WHRD-MENA Coalition convening September 2018
- Bali, at the People’s Global Conference, October 2018
Documenting feminist realities

Working closely with partner organizations and media platforms like OpenDemocracy, we documented stories of feminist realities.

- In Guatemala, Mayan weavers are organizing to defend their art, pushing for new legislation to recognize and protect their ‘collective intellectual property’.
- In rural Paraguay, women are on the frontlines of a ‘race against time’ to save native seeds.
Organizational sustainability and resilience
Organizational sustainability and resilience

We embarked on practices and policies that contribute to an enabling work environment grounded in intersectional feminist principles that facilitate high-quality, impactful work.

“Given the diversity of our personal backgrounds and organizational roles, just coming together is a learning experience in itself.”
- Staff feedback on meeting face to face in 2018

Shared leadership

At AWID, we spend a lot of time thinking about power, and how it functions not only in the world at large but also within our organization. We know very clearly that optimal feminist leadership is not just about a single role or a person.

After a successful leadership transition in 2017 from a single Executive Director (ED) to a co-ED model, we continue to deepen the practice of shared leadership throughout the organization. Our model of shared leadership is practice-in-process and we have created a bold organization structure to support that.

In 2018, 97% of AWID staff said they were “very and somewhat satisfied” working at AWID - the highest level of staff satisfaction since we started conducting staff surveys in 2009.

Results from the 2018 staff survey:

- 82% said that they had opportunities to practice shared leadership
- 75% said they were able to practice shared leadership “quite a bit” or “a lot”
A bold architecture

Our current reorganization is structured around project teams.

This structure and way of working take ongoing discussion and agreements, and continuous attention to decision-making processes and power.

Team members, regardless of their formal accountability roles run projects, represent AWID in important spaces, take initiative to solve problems, invent new processes or challenge existing ones that don’t work.

Strengthening our foundations

AWID advanced a major update of our human resources employee handbook that improved our policies and matched our organizational processes to our bold and ambitious strategic plan.

We have invested and are more deliberate in our planning, monitoring, evaluation and learning processes to ensure that our hard work has the impact we want to see in the world and that we continue to build a strong organization.

We invested in staff development through coaching, training, accompaniment and on the job learning.

We raised the income needed to deliver our ambitious annual workplan and secured a clean audit for the year.
Transformation through collective action

AWID believes in the power of feminist movements. Meaningful change happens when feminists from around the world take action.

We have 5,486 members all around the world - organizations and individuals - dedicated to advancing feminist agendas.

Distribution of our membership at the end of 2018

Who are they?

Institutional members: 338 (6%)

Individual members: 5,148 (94%)
